NEW BOOK. New thoroughly edited, richly illustrated and annotated edition of H.C. Andersen's (1805-1875) memories from the first 27 years of his life.

He writes about his birth and childhood in Odense, about the journey to and stay in Copenhagen, about his stays at the Latin schools in Slagelse and Helsingør and about his love affair with Riborg Voigt, which he met during one of his visits to Funen.

Before he becomes a student and subsequently unfolds as a writer, poet and playwright, we read about his experiences as a singer, actor and ballet dancer, and how it is said that he could become a farmer or bookbinder, become a tailor or watchmaker, work in an office or - like his father - become a shoemaker, as well as about how he in Odense tries his hand as a work boy at a clothing factory and a tobacco factory and in Copenhagen, in Gothersgade, as a work boy in a carpentry shop.

This new modern Danish edition of "Levnedsbog" has been thoroughly edited by author and philosopher, mag.art. Jens Staubrand and also richly illustrated and commented. It is the publisher's hope that this edition of H.C. Andersen's "Life Book" will appeal to the contemporary reader, just as it is our hope that the book's pictures and their often full texts give the reader a deeper and richer reading experience than if one had only the naked text.
